Do you think such an enormous business could be built up and continually increased, if our goods did not have exceptional value and merit? Do you think we could hold the trade of half a million people, if our reputation for doing exactly what we say wasn't firmly established? Do you think U. S. Senators, Foreign Ambassadors, Bankers, Business and Professional men in every section of this country would keep on using HAYNER WHISKEY if it wasn't all right? Do you think doctors would recommend it and hospitals use it, if it wasn't absolutely pure and unadulterated? Just think these things over carefully and then send us a trial order. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

R. HUDSON BURR RETURNS HOME

SAYS REPORT OF HIS DEADWOOD
SPEECH WAS FALSE REGARD-ING STATEMENT ABOUT
HINES.

The Tallahassee Capital of Saturday says: Railroad Commissioner R. Hudson Burr returned a few days ago from Deadwood, South Dakota, where he attended the annual convention of Railway Commissioners of the United States, which was held in that city August 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th.

After the convention was over Mr. Burr took quite an extended trip through the northwest, including in his itinerary, Helena, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Oregon, San Francisco and Denver. He was very much pleased with that section of the country, but says he was glad to get back to Florida again, which he thinks is the greatest state in the union.

When asked about the Associated Press dispatches sent out from Deadwood regarding what he said of the several sworn statements of Mr. Walker D. Hines, as to the value of the Louisville and Nashville railroad properties, he said:

"All I have to say regarding the incident is, that I stated nothing but the facts, and have nothing to retract, but

Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ that digs up the scalp in scales as it burrows its way to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out. ## FUNERAL SUNDAY OF FRANK R. GOULDING

Was Attended By Large Number of Persons—Floral Tributes Exceedingly Numerous.

Gradually the old Confederate Veterans are passing away. One by one they are crossing the river where they rest beneath the shade of the trees. Sunday afternoon from St. Katherine's Episcopal church, almost beneath the shadow of whose cross he has resided, all that was mortal of Frank Ross Goulding received its last sad rites, and now he sleeps under the sod in St. Johns cemetery beside the relatives who have preceded him. Surviving comrades carried him thither and the "ashes to ashes and dust to dust" was recited over his cold clay.

There were sisters and a brother absent; the cruel quarantine kept them away. The oldest son came barely before it was rendered impossible to enter the city.

Had Pensacola been possessed of her usual population and the county been freely traversed the funeral of Mr. Goulding would have been largely attended. As it was many cherished his memory and sentiments tender and comforting were received from numbers who could not cross the cord.

The floral tributes, which were placed upon the grave by loving hands, were exceedingly numerous and beautiful, and attested to the high esteem in which the deceased was held by Pensacolians.

A SCRUBBING BRUSH.

The Way It Is Made and the Reason It Costs So Little.

Two things have made it possible for the modern "lady of the house" to buy for 5 or 10 cents a scrubbing brush which would have cost her mother half a dollar. One is the invention of the brush filling machine, the other the discovery of the possibilities of "fiber." This is a comprehensive word. It embraces all sorts of vegetable substances which, from their stiffness when wet, their tenacity and their divisibility, can be made to take the place of bristles. One of the commonest is that known as "bass" or "bast." It is the leaf fiber of the papyrus tree and is imported from Africa, Ceylon and South America. The factories receive it in the form of large bales, each made up of separate bales or "pig-tails," which must first be hacked or combed, much as wool or flax is carded.

When the fibers have thus been laid parallel the bunch or pigtail is passed to the guillotine, a cutter in which the material is steadily fed forward, while a blade like that of the French instrument of execution cuts it into the desired lengths.

Meanwhile the back of the future brush has been prepared. It may be made from any kind of hardwood, but beech, birch and maple are the favorites. The blanks are sawed to size and are finished on the edges by revolving cutters, like those of an ordinary molding machine or of the lathe for turning laths. They are then ready to be bored.

This was formerly done by a drill which made each hole separately. The modern machine contains as many drills as there are holes to be bored. They may be arranged in any desired pattern, and at a single thrust will bore all the holes and bore them to a uniform depth. The back and the filling now come together. The fiber, cut to twice the length of each tuft, is placed in the trough of the filling machine, from which a toothed rack picks up exactly the same quantity each time—enough for one knot or tuft. As this little bunch of fiber advances on one side of the machine a strip of iron feeds forward on the other. The two will meet above the holes in the back of the brush, which the operator is holding in place, but just before that happens a die descends and punches from the strip of metal a small piece shaped somewhat like an inverted pair of trousers.

This bit of iron is known as the "an-chor." It is deposited, waistband down, upon the center of the tuft of fiber. That is simultaneously folded upon itself, thrust into the waiting hole in the brush back and driven home by a plunger.

The blow serves not merely to force the knot or tuft of fiber to the bottom of the hole, but, striking between the two shanks of iron which represent the legs of the trousers, it spreads them apart and so drives the sharp outer and upper corners into the wood at the sides of the hole. A pull on the tuft of fiber merely presses these corners deeper into the wood and locks the tuft more securely.

Two brushes a minute is the average rate at which all this is done. The operator's only duties are to see that the machine has a sufficient supply of fiber and of metal tape and that the brush back is so placed that the plunger hits the hole accurately.—Youth's Companion.

No time should be lost, because lung trouble may easily develop into pneumonia or consumption. Hamlin's Wizard Oil, applied to the chest, relieves the pain and inflammation, loosens up the cough and soon cures the disease.

"My little girl," writes Rich. W. Thornton of Quay, Colo., "suffered more or less with a cold on the lungs since her birth, and finally the trouble became serious. No remedies gave relief, until we tried Hamlin's Wizard Oil, one bottle of which permanently cured her." Price 50c and $1.00.

ACT OF BRAVERY BY RUSSIAN STEWARDS

John Bilsen Jumps Over Bow of Vessel to Rescue Drowning
White Boy Sunday.

An act of bravery that is worth noting was performed Sunday afternoon by the steward of the Russian schooner Noas which is lying at the East side of Tarragona street wharf.

Two white boys were at that point fishing when one of them fell off the wharf into the water. A current was running, and the boy was carried under the piling and would probably have drowned but for the presence of ming and bravery of Steward John Bilsen of the Russian vessel, who was standing near the forecastle and saw the lad when he went overboard. Without a moment's hesitation, Bilsen dived over the bow of the ship and grasped the boy as they both came to the surface under the wharf. Then by the aid of a line which another member of the crew threw them the two were drawn out of the water.

The boy's name was not learned as he appeared to be very much frightened and, jumping onto his bicycle on the wharf, he rode off at a fast speed.

The act of bravery on the part of Steward Bilsen was one which not every man would have performed and he deserves special note not only for his bravery, but for the coolness and presence of mind which he displayed.

FUTURE OF DEEP WATER CITY ASSURED

Present Affliction Will Not Be Permanent Blight Upon City's Progress—Comparison of Sanitary Methods.

Editor Pensacola Journal:

Yesterday's issue announcing no new cases in 48 hours and only one death, reveals the proverbial "silver lining" of the dark cloud of misfortune, whose sombre shadows have hung with pall-like drapery over our beloved city for a fortnight. May the glad hope which these tidings bring brighten with each succeeding day until it finds full fruition in the happy fact, that Pensacola can point with smiles and pride to her clean bill of health.

The ordinance published in the same issue relating to sanitary inspection is of scarcely less importance to the city than the one authorizing the issuance of improvement bonds. A uniformly, firm and effective enforcement of this ordinance, will spare our city a repetition of her present disaster, through all the coming years, and secure her title to the claim of being the healthiest city of the entire gulf or Atlantic coast. If men and measures had been as considerate of Pensacola's sanitary needs as nature has been lavish in contributing to her health conditions, there is scarcely room for doubt but that '82 would still hold the date of her last yellow fever visitation. But the slight loss to her prestige which indifference and negligence have entailed, can, and from the ordinance referred to, will soon be recovered and the unhappy circumstances which for the moment surround her will soon be forgotten in the bright future which is as surely here as day follows night.

I am fully aware that comparisons are sometimes odious, but their odium may prove an incentive. In a former letter I referred to Atlanta's fine sanitary condition. I will now proceed to draw a comparison, and the difference will be obvious. Both incidents occurred as I shall relate.

A highly respectable citizen of Atlanta was recently ordered by one of her sanitary inspectors to cut the grass and weeds in his yard. The former demurred on the grounds that the yard and the grass belonged to him, and he did not care to comply. The inspector returned a short while afterwards and as his orders had not been obeyed he reported the matter and the citizen was promptly arrested, arraigned and fined $50.00 and costs. In another city not very long since a citizen(?) of foreign birth with habits still more foreign to health was arrested, convicted and fined $3.00 for planting spoiled fish, the most offensive of all offal, in his back yard. A comparison of the enormity of the offenses together with the respective penalties imposed, may serve to indicate the difference between the sanitary condition of the two cities.

There is no local cause for sickness in or near Pensacola, and when her normal conditions are restored, and her sanitary inspectors are vested with authority to exact obedience to the requirements of the ordinance governing sanitary measures, she will assert and steadfastly maintain her claim to be recognized as the most healthy and pleasant city to live in the year round of any in the whole sunny south.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler, of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Cleburne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some soured meat and I gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was cured in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner and one small bottle cured the three of us." For sale by all druggists.
